Plagiarism Statement

I understand that I must use research conventions to cite and clearly mark other people's ideas and words within my paper. I understand that plagiarism is an act of intellectual dishonesty. I understand it is academically unethical and unacceptable to do any of the following acts of which I will be immediately expelled without refund:

- To submit an essay written in whole or in part by another student as if it were my own.
- To download an essay from the internet, then quote or paraphrase from it, in whole or in part, without acknowledging the original source.
- To restate a clever phrase verbatim from another writer without acknowledging the source.
- To paraphrase part of another writer's work without acknowledging the source.
- To reproduce the substance of another writer's argument without acknowledging the source.
- To take work originally done for one instructor's assignment and re-submit it to another teacher.
- To cheat on tests or quizzes through the use of crib sheets, hidden notes, viewing another student's paper, revealing the answers on my own paper to another student through verbal or textual communication, sign language, or other means of storing and communicating information--including electronic devices, recording devices, cellular telephones, headsets, and portable computers.
- To copy another student's work and submit the work as if it were the product of my own labor.

What is Mixed Media Art?

The term "mixed media art" is a broad definition that covers many arts and crafts, including collage, assemblage (both 2D and 3D), altered objects, including books and boxes, handmade greeting cards, artist trading cards (ATCs) and tags, art journaling and book making.

Mixed media art signifies the use of different media in the creation of one work. This can allow for great versatility and a rich viewer experience as the eye uncovers the multiple layers that often characterize mixed media art. The character of mixed media contributes to its popularity within the contemporary art world, as it can blend well with conceptual visual formulation. The end result can be less a direct visual statement than a way to bring irony into play as a comment on a visual statement. Mixed media art is frequently used to express political views or social statements. Common media combinations include oil paint, graphite, textiles, or sculpture. However, mixed media pieces can include almost anything. For example, found objects can be used in conjunction with traditional artist media. The different combinations of media and varying composition, color, and texture can all be used for interesting effect. It has been said, "Art is not a thing; it is a way." The process and materials used to create a work of art are always of interest; with mixed media they are central to the work itself. The fact of the mediums, their texture and look, their presence, are important parts of the message conveyed.

Hanging Art

The "mixed media" used includes paints, papers and board of all descriptions, glues, buttons, fabrics, found objects, photos, metal bits, fibres, things from nature, inks, pencils, crayons, markers, pastels and polymer clays, to name a few.

What materials do I need to get started?

The beauty of mixed media art is the flexibility to start with things around you and expand from there. To get started you need a substrate or base. This could be a clean sheet of paper, sketchbook, a cereal box or anything else that may be sitting still. Then, if you are heading down the collage path, you'll need something to stick with (glue sticks are fine to begin with) and something to stick on (colored papers, newspapers, catalogues, and anything else that grabs you).

If you are heading down the drawing / painting path, then once you have your substrate, you'll need something to make a mark, whether its pencils, paints, crayons, markers or pastels.

Any or all of these are all you need to get started. Just use the things you have around you

What skills do I need to get started?

Another attractive feature of Mixed Media Art is that you don't need fine art or drawing skills. That doesn't mean you are excluded from mixed media art if you do have these skills, but it opens up a world of creativity for the rest of us who like to make things but "Can't draw".

The skills you need to get started are as simple as being able to use a pencil, scissors and glue. These skills will expand and develop with practice, depending on which "branch" you follow. More complicated skills of mixing paints and developing your "artist eye" will happen as you expand your own creativity. Specific skills for particular media or art types will present themselves as you move into these areas.

PROJECT: 12 HUE COLOR WHEEL

ASSIGNMENT: You MUST use colored pencils and your name must be visible on your work.

Make a basic color wheel using 12 hues -- three primary colors and three secondary colors with the six tertiary colors between them and neutral in the center. The colors must be chosen so that they are hues equally spaced around the color circle. The primaries must be cyan, magenta and yellow. It must be clear which colors are primaries, secondaries and tertiaries. The design of the color wheel must have the secondary colors overlapping the primary colors to produce the tertiary colors. Any shapes may be used but it should be clear which colors are primaries, which are secondaries and which are tertiaries.

Recycle Art

Recycle art is made from recycling, reusing, upcycling, etc. The goal is to be a kind of portfolio based on ideas in which you can brainstorm your sustainability creativity. Recycling is the future, our mother earth have limited resources, we have to see things in a different way and learn how to REuse, REcycle and REDuce our materials and products consumption in order to decrease our footprint! Recycle Art may help you to tackle this challenge!

Art Made from Food

Someone must have told the following artists not to play with their food way too many times, to the point that it became a rebellious habit that some might describe as a psychosis. Regardless of how they became inspired to use food as an art medium or subject, these food artists and sculptors have created some amazing food-scapes, paintings, sculptures and even entire rooms that are at times mouthwatering and at others stomach turning. With masterpieces like bacon villages and a pope made of pizza, here are the most creative food artists around who truly practice a strange art of design.
